Dear Chairman Martin:

I am concerned that the transition to digital television broadcasting in 2009 will become an electronic waste nightmare. It is imperative that the FCC require manufacturers-who stand to make millions from the transition-to take back TVs made obsolete by the DTV transition. Sony is taking back its electronics for recycling-the others can as well. It is crucial that the FCC launch a program to educate consumers about the importance of recycling electronics and work to help set up local electronic recycling drop-offs. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely yours,

Judith Rousso
